THIS IS AN IN-PERSON EVENT

*UofM Urban Research Outreach/Engagement Center (UROC)
2001 Plymouth Ave N, Minneapolis*

Achieving racial parity in homeownership in Minnesota requires intention and action by all industry partners to eliminate the systemic barriers impacting communities of color. Understanding the past is the first step.

At this program, we will screen the Twin Cities Public Television-produced Jim Crow of the North, which documents the history and continuing impact of racist real estate covenants in the Twin Cities. The screening will be followed by a panel discussion featuring:

- Daniel Bergin, director and producer of Jim Crow of the North
 - Bergin will discuss his experience and learnings from filming the Jim Crow documentary.
- Kirsten Delegard, co-director/co-founder of the Mapping Prejudice Project
 - Mapping Prejudice, based at the University of Minnesota, identifies and maps racial covenants - clauses that were inserted into property deeds to keep people who were not White from buying or occupying homes.
- Libby Starling, director of community development and engagement at the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis
 - Starling will present recent research findings documenting higher mortgage loan denial rates for Black borrowers in the Twin Cities compared to borrowers of other races, even after adjusting for differences in borrower and loan characteristics.

Light refreshments will be served.

No registration is required.
